

Autodesk Assistance Program Employer Discount

Frequently Asked Questions for Customers

The Autodesk Assistance Program is designed to help displaced employees update their skills and improve their employment opportunities in a down economy. As members of the architecture, engineering, design and manufacturing communities, Autodesk and its partners will be providing important deliverables to qualified program participants, including student licenses of software, online training, classroom training through participating partners, and discounts for certification programs.

The Autodesk Assistance Program Employer Discount Program is an extension of the Autodesk Assistance Program, and provides discounts on new licenses of select Autodesk® products to Autodesk Assistance Program members that have a need for a commercial license of Autodesk products, or employers that hire Autodesk Assistance Program members.

1. What is the Autodesk Assistance Program Employer Discount?

The Autodesk Assistance Program Employer Discount is designed to help architecture, engineering, design and manufacturing companies hire new employees as their business rebounds, or grows in this tough economic environment, while helping Autodesk Assistance Program Members become more employable.

Autodesk will be offering discounts on new licenses of select Autodesk products for firms that hire Autodesk Assistance Program members, or for Autodesk Assistance Program members that need a commercial license of Autodesk® software.

Autodesk reserves the right to change or terminate this program at its discretion.

2. Why is Autodesk offering product discounts as part of the Autodesk Assistance Program?

Autodesk recognizes that companies recovering from a downturn in their business are evaluating anticipated expenses related to hiring and on-boarding new employees. Autodesk Assistance Program members have had access to software, training, and certification resources, enabling themselves to become conversant in today's new design paradigms, such as Building Information Modeling (BIM) and Digital Prototyping (DP). When program members leverage these benefits, it can significantly reduce a firm's on-boarding cost for new employees.

Additionally, Autodesk recognizes that many great companies and consultancies are born in economic environments like the one we are in today, as displaced professionals begin to work on their own. The Autodesk Assistance Program provides the resources necessary for these professionals to sharpen their skills with the latest technologies that will help to make them competitive in the market place.

The Autodesk Assistance Program Employer Discount is intended to help both of these audiences beyond training costs by decreasing the initial purchase cost of licensing Autodesk software. Combined with the Autodesk Assistance Program, this discount will help companies to realize greater productivity with a trained workforce using the latest design technology.
